

A Message to Exhibitors

An opportunity to forge new contacts, gain product exposure and provide a valuable resource to a national audience is now available to you. Exhibits are open 3 full days and feature An Evening With Exhibitors Reception for high visibility. Apply now to contribute to the educational opportunities at the 5th Annual Environmental Training Institute for Small Communities. Mark your calendar and join us in Morgantown, West Virginia, July 27-30, 2004.

In past years, Institute participants have requested more information on specific technologies available for use in small communities. In response to this request, exhibitors have the opportunity to give a 20 minute PowerPoint® Presentation in the new session Technology Talks on Wednesday afternoon. This will better serve participants and provide exhibitors greater exposure.

This training event is the gathering place for small communities. Technical assistance providers, circuit riders and environmental trainers attend the Institute to improve skills and discover resources to take back to their states. Operators, system managers, regulators, public health staff, local officials and engineers will be seeking the up-to-date technologies you can provide. Many participants come to get continuing education credits for certification and licensing.

Last year over 300 registrations were received from 27 states. Nationally recognized trainers conducted over 18 courses. This year we want to expand the opportunities for learning and networking. Join us and showcase your services and products related to the wastewater, drinking water, security and environmental management specific to the needs of communities whose populations are less than 10,000.

I hope to see you in Morgantown in July.

Sincerely,

Scott Freudenburg
